

PLANNING TO SEND LABORERS TO HAWAII

Meeting Held to Devise Scheme to Attract Italians.

UNITED STATES TO GIVE SUPPORT

Climatic Conditions Suited to Labor Born in Italy.

Through a meeting held in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, the United States has given its moral support to a plan of the Hawaiian Government to "Americanize" the labor of the island. The meeting was attended by Secretary Garfield, Governor Frazier of Hawaii, Ernesto Fabri, formerly a partner of J. P. Morgan, and now secretary of the society of Italian immigrants at New York, and John J. D. Trenor, agent of the board of immigration of the Territory of Hawaii.

Some 96 per cent of the agriculture of the islands is devoted to sugar. The labor comes from all nationalities, but includes a preponderance of Orientals, chiefly Japanese.

American Basis.
The desire of the government is to introduce a class of men and women who shall remain permanent residents and build a strong foundation, on an American basis, for the great prosperity which Hawaii is destined to enjoy after the Panama Canal is opened. The islands will be directly in the path of three-quarters of the commerce of the world, and a future is in store for this most beautiful spot in the Pacific of which its early colonists never dreamed.

The plans of the Government to attract American labor are not fully formulated, but their rough outline they appear to offer inducements superior to any ever before held out to the working man and his family. For example, each certified man on arrival will be assigned a plot of land, on which the Government will erect a substantial house for his occupancy. Fires never are used for heating on the island, but the laborer will be supplied free with fuel for cooking, medicines, hospital service, and other likely necessities which he could not otherwise easily provide for himself. At the end of three years, provided he has served faithfully, the house and lot will become the laborer's own property.

Familiar Work.
The work of cultivation is that to which the immigrants most desired are accustomed at home. Italians are the favored race, partly because of the similarity of the climate to their own. Another reason is, as stated, that they are accustomed to work in the fields; and a third, which appeals to the Italian leaders in the United States, is that they deprecate the tendency of this naturally open people to swarm to the American cities and there suffer the disease and death which are incident to the close life of great municipalities. Each immigrant will cost the Government about $100 for transportation.

Contrary to what may be the popular notion, the American sugar trust has no holdings in the Hawaiian Islands. It buys the product in the form of raw sugar, but the plantations are owned and managed by stock companies, whose investors represent capital in all parts of the world. Only one sugar refinery is maintained on the island of Oahu. The Hawaiian planters are fearful of any reduction of the American duties on sugar, for they say that the cost of freight on a ton of sugar from New York is $1.50, while Porto Rican and Cuban sugar comes here at something like $1.20 a ton. The Hawaiian sugar trust, the Hawaiian sugar trust, would wipe out their industry.

ROOSEVELT IS URGED TO PARDON OHIO MAN

Appeal Made in Behalf of Bank Director Serving Long Term Sentence.

Representatives Ansberry, Keifer, and Cole of Ohio, and Landis of Indiana interceded with President Roosevelt this morning in behalf of Edward Flickinger, a prominent Ohio manufacturer, who is now serving a long-term sentence in a Federal penitentiary, on account of the failure of a national bank at Galion, of which he was a director.

Representative Ansberry acted as spokesman for the Congressional pleaders, and told the President that Mr. Flickinger had not known of the transactions which led up to the failure. The President, he said, wasn't visibly inclined to pardon Mr. Flickinger.

R. H. LYNN INTERESTS BUY AMERICAN BANK

R. N. Harper Sells 700
Shares and Gives Option on 400.

SENATOR ELKINS BACK OF PURCHASE

Amicable End of Controversy
Assures Institution's Rapid Growth.

By the terms of the contract made between Robert N. Harper, former president of the American National Bank, and R. H. Lynn, the present president, the former has sold 700 shares of the capital stock of the bank for $180 a share, involving a transfer of $126,000. Mr. Harper has the option of delivering 400 additional shares at the same price. In the event of this option being exercised the actual money involved in the deal will be $72,000.

While Mr. Lynn signed the contract, it is stated that the purchase of the stock was made by Senator Elkins, a large shareholder in the American National Bank and a personal friend of Mr. Lynn.

The purchase of Mr. Harper's stock ends the uncertainty over who will be elected president at the annual meeting in January. Mr. Lynn will be named to succeed himself.

Means Much to Bank.

Moreover, it means that the American National Bank is sure to become one of the most prominent banking institutions in this section of the country. Negotiations are now going on looking to the absorption of a large national bank, and a satisfactory termination is expected before the end of the current month. Moreover the American National will control a promising trust company. On the basis of plans now maturing the American National will have deposits of between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 before long.

This bank was organized five years ago. At that time William Selby, Albert C. West and J. W. Williams, all officials of the bank at this time; Mr. Lynn who came from the Leesburg, Va., National, and Mr. Harper, organized the American National. At the outset the deposits were $100,000.

R. H. LYNN.
He Gets Control of Big Bank.

The first three men came from the Citizens' National Bank of Washington.

Deposits Over Two Millions.

This morning the deposits of the bank were $2,500,000. The quotations on the Stock Exchange yesterday for American National Bank shares were $159 bid, $174 asked. A short time ago valuations were much higher, the Harper and Lynn interests contending in the open market for the stock. The latter however rallied the largest following of stockholders to his support and the transfer of Mr. Harper's stock holdings at a big price, is in the nature of an amicable settlement of the situation, which grew out of Mr. Harper's resignation from the presidency of the institution and a desire again to head the institution.

On "Change today the bid and asked prices of the bank's shares were 152 bid, 157 1/2 asked.

GOTAM BANKERS WANT COREY YOU

Change of Administration
Leaves Him Free to Accept Bank Presidency.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—The announcement that George E. Cortelyou, Secretary of the Treasury, had been offered the presidency of the Union Trust Company, to fill the vacancy caused by the death, on November 18, of Edward King, who headed the company thirty-five years, was received in financial circles today with much satisfaction. Mr. Cortelyou has refrained from making a statement, it is known he has the matter under consideration, and so flattery is the offer said to be that it is possible he will accept. Friends of the Secretary said today that inasmuch as the offer is soon to be made, the Administration, he will probably not feel bound by any future word he may have mapped out in the Treasury Department, as was the case when he declined the presidency of the Knickerbocker Trust Company last fall. Should Mr. Cortelyou accept the presidency of the Union Trust Company he would be the fourth successive Secretary of the Treasury to leave the Cabinet and become the head of a trust company in this city. The others were: Charles S. Fairchild, who became president of the New York Security and Trust Company; Lyman Gage, who became head of the United States Trust; and Leslie M. Shaw, who accepted the presidency of the Carnegie Trust.

John D. Rockefeller acted through the Union Trust Company during the period in which the matters of relief he advanced independently. It is believed he drew on the institution for as much as $10,000,000. The company, which was organized in 1864, has a capitalization of $10,000,000, with surplus and undivided profits of $3,180,000. The deposits are more than $53,000,000, loans $37,000,000, and the company pays an annual dividend of 5 per cent.

Cortelyou Declines To Discuss Offer

Secretary Cortelyou, of the Treasury Department, steadfastly declines to make any comment on the report that he will become president of the Union Trust Company of New York to succeed the late Edward King.

Mr. Cortelyou, if he has the matter under consideration, is plainly determined that he will make his own statement when the proper time comes, but it is generally believed that he has not accepted the offer or will do so within the next few days.

INAUGURAL GRANTS UP TO DEPARTMENTS

Proposal to Use Pension Office and Reservations Awaits Report of Secretaries.

The proposal to use the Pension Office for the inaugural ball next month, which was embodied in a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Congressman Smith, together with the use by the inaugural committee of certain Government reservations, was today referred to Secretary Wright, of the War Department; Secretary Garfield, of the Interior Department; and to the District Commissioners for a report as to whether the bill meets with their approval.

If no objections are entered, the House District Committee probably will make a favorable report on the bill.

Remember, the second installment of that great serial story, "A Woman to Win," will appear in the Sunday evening edition of The Times. You will find it on Page 8 of this issue.

RECORDERS OFFICE SCENE OF TROUBLE

Question of Need or Needlessness of Cashier Raised by Clerks.

Discussion has broken loose in the office of the Recorder of Deeds, and a concerted effort is being made to show that a cashier in the office would be an unnecessary encumbrance, to say nothing of a constant source of annoyance to the four clerks who failed to get the promotion. The clerk for whom the promotion was intended now pulls down $200 a year. The job as cashier, which, according to some of his fellow-workers, would mean the assumption of a title without additional labor, would net him an increase of $700. There being no need for five cashiers and no clerks, the clerks are disposed to get along without any cashier at all.

This view is expressed in a letter received by the House District Committee today from W. A. Pinchback, a clerk in the Recorder's office. Mr. Pinchback deprecates the contemplated waste of Government funds. He protests against a policy of favoritism which would raise one of his fellow-workers out of the ranks and place him on the pinnacle of a $1,000 job, leaving four $200 clerks behind in the lurch. He further sets forth the interesting argument that the elevation of a clerk to be cashier would be a promotion, only in the sense that it would grant an increase in pay to the clerk, but not in the sense that it would grant him a new position. He says that the duties for which he receives $200.

The bill providing for the appointment of a cashier was introduced a year ago by Representative Hull of Iowa, and it has been slumbering ever since. John C. Dancy, Recorder of Deeds at that time, urged the necessity for a cashier.

Mr. Pinchback said today that his position was such a delicate one that he could not afford to disclose to the public the name of the man against whose promotion he had lodged a protest.

Mr. Dancy was asked if he still wanted a cashier. "We asked for an appropriation for that purpose last year," he said.

His attention was called to the fact that one of his clerks quoted him as saying that the appointment of a cashier would be an insult to the remainder of the office force.

"I can't say anything about it now," said Mr. Dancy. "I will deal with it at the proper time."

"But do you really need a cashier?" was asked.

"I have nothing to say," he replied.

BRESNAHAN TO LEAD TEAM OF CARDINALS

Trade Made With New York. Karger Goes to Cincinnati.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 12.—H. W. Lantieri, sporting editor of the St. Louis Times, has received this message from M. S. Robinson, owner of the St. Louis National League club, dated New York: "Have made trade for Bresnahan to manage Cardinals. Karger and either Fromme or Lush to go to Cincinnati. Murray, Raymond, and Schiefel go to New York."

ATHLETICS GET CATCHER.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 12.—After a month of planning and dickering the Athletics have landed a new catcher and next season Ira Thomas, the Detroit backstop, will be wearing an Athletic uniform. The news has not been given out officially by any of the Philadelphia clubs, but the fact remains that the deal has been put through and that Connie Mack secured the player only by putting up a fat sum of money.

PAINTINGS BY REID ARE ON EXHIBITION

Private View This Afternoon
Will Be Made Social Affair.

HIS WORK MARKED BY INDIVIDUALITY

Thirty-four Pictures Form Exhibit Will Be Seen Daily Until December 23.

It is extremely difficult to locate the position of Robert Reid among the painters of this country after a careful examination of the thirty-four paintings being shown at a private view this afternoon at the Everett Hall studio in Thirty-second street, Georgetown. It is a social event as well as an art event, for Mrs. Reid is assisting her artist husband in welcoming the guests.

In his art work Mr. Reid is not reminiscent of the painters of the past or the present. The individuality of his work is pleasing in subject, in arrangement, in color, and in that rare temperamental quality which always separates the man of dreams from the realist and the statistician. With these definable qualities there remains something not easily stated. This is a feeling that the artist is a sincere lover of the beautiful, and that this appeal of beauty is subtle and deep, that he has chosen his own path and hewed the way that in the honors which have come to him deservedly there is no desire to have his paintings shout at one in commanding tones or attract by force of gesture or brilliancy of color. He charms through tenderness rather than by domination. He has gone his own way, happily and contentedly, and the recognition of his genius has been abundant.

Mr. Reid Fortunate.

Mr. Reid has been fortunate in securing the loan of this studio from his friend, F. D. Millet, for this exhibition, which will be continued daily until December 23, during the afternoon. It is also fortunate that he will be able to determine how many in this city are appreciative enough to go this distance to see one of the best exhibitions of paintings by a single artist ever shown in this city. Surely among all of the art lovers there will be some who will permit the removal of these exhibited works of art from the city.

Mr. Reid is prominent for his marked appreciation of the delicate tones of color and of the subtle play of light. It seems to be an appreciation rather than a paintable fact. Of the quiet tones of the fading day, the early morning, or of the more uncertain effect of moonlight, he paints impressions, but they are understandable, he records color in wide ranges, but never in the work a rare decorative quality without moral characteristics. He portrays every domestic scene with an appreciative quality which is void of flattery, and yet in all the general impression is that his models are beautiful.

The place of honor in the arrangement of the pictures has been given to "The Golden Screen," a large seated portrait of Mrs. Reid, in which the background suggests the title. This picture is a masterpiece of color and of the most suggestive study of the most pressing problems of the day. The present book is of a practical nature, and goes fully into such matters as the organization of games, educational classes, annual encampments, and discipline and finance. It points out the value of the game of life, and the success in such a way that the beginner may be able to begin the work with the necessary routine thoroughly mapped out.

Grammar and Matrimony.

There was a man who could not wed. A fact which caused him to fret and brood, and as of increasing importance, especially with regard to the conditions of life in large towns. From their wide experience in the industrial districts of Lancashire, England, the authors speak with authority, the ear-liest book about mentioned—having been widely discussed, and accepted as a valuable and suggestive study of one of the most pressing problems of the day.

"Sunset Glow," No. 6, is one of the recent works by this artist, who has given in this exhibition a retrospective view of his art endeavor. The standing figure of a young girl with face in profile is slightly flecked with the last rays of diffused sunlight. The background is decorative but not specific, the whole effect is appealing in its qualities of beauty, and void of any jarring, discordant feature.

"The White Lilac" No. 3, is notable for the atmospheric quality through which one sees a plain fence, an ancient gate, and a tree, like a sign of the times. The mood, and delicate exhibited in the treatment of the subject, the absence of an attempt at more than a simple, direct, and sincere expression of beauty, by suggestion rather than by statement.

The not of the whole exhibition is toward that quality of beauty that is not only decorative but abiding. The artist is not bound by conventional rules, nor does he rely on the whole works have that quality which would make them welcome and in place in the home of the humble. They would dignify the mansions of the rich.

ROMANCE STARTED IN ART INSTITUTE

Young Jap Scion of Great Family to Wed Society Belle.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—An American-Japanese romance, which had its inception in the art institute two years ago, is to culminate in the marriage of Miss Lucene Goodenow, a society girl of Woodlawn, and Kiokoi Lunakat, a Japanese artist, who is said to be heir-apparent to one of the oldest titles in Japan. Last night at her home, Miss Goodenow admitted her engagement, but said that they would wait for about two years to give her husband a chance to complete his studies at the art institute. At present, he is working on a group of Japanese figures, and will be exhibited next spring. Miss Goodenow is herself an artist and poet. She is twenty-one years old and a native of Kalamazoo, Mich.

Rich Tyler, stewards.

LONG-AWAITED "HELIANTHUS," EARLY NEXT MONTH.

The Macmillan Company announces that "Helianthus," the long awaited novel by Ouida, which was first promised some years ago, is to be published next month. Nearly all of the story has been put in type before the author's death, and the proofs had been corrected by her.

The Philosophy of Loyalty.

Probably no American philosopher commands a larger audience than Prof. Josiah Royce of Harvard, and his book on "The Philosophy of Loyalty," which was published last year, has made a deep impression. It is announced that Prof. Royce will follow up this work with a volume devoted to certain outstanding problems of American life, to be entitled "Provincialism, Race Questions, and Other American Problems."

Not Christian Science.

Psychotherapy—a course of reading—is the title chosen for a series of publications issued monthly of which the first appears this month, dealing with the whole field of mental healing and suggestion. The title "Psychotherapy" is a defining article by Dr. Richard C. Cabot, of the Harvard Medical School as meaning "the attempt to bring about mental, moral, and spiritual methods."

The purpose of the course is said to be in no sense hostile to any of the existing popular movements—whether it is the Emmanuel Church movements, Christian Science, Faith Cure, The New Thought, or what not. Its purpose is to give an inclusive and scientific yet popular treatment of all phenomena which fall within its field.

Pumpkins and Turkeys.

In "Peter Pumpkin in Wonderland," the tables are turned for the small boy who looks upon Jack-o'-lanterns as vegetables grown for his amusement and upon turkeys with a mental vision, which suggests nothing more than the possibilities of a Thanksgiving dinner. The pumpkin and turkey are moved about in roles of concrete personalities. Most little boys and most little girls should be content to just sit back and look on without trying to get mixed up in the story. It is a charming book for children of four and six, who are usually so interested in the things increased by the appropriate illustrations.

On Clubs for Boys at Work.

"Working Lads' Clubs," by Charles E. B. Russell and Lillian M. Rigby, is a book which is of increasing importance, especially with regard to the conditions of life in large towns. From their wide experience in the industrial districts of Lancashire, England, the authors speak with authority, the earliest book about mentioned—having been widely discussed, and accepted as a valuable and suggestive study of one of the most pressing problems of the day.

The present book is of a practical nature, and goes fully into such matters as the organization of games, educational classes, annual encampments, and discipline and finance. It points out the value of the game of life, and the success in such a way that the beginner may be able to begin the work with the necessary routine thoroughly mapped out.

A Woman's View of "Togetherness."

According to the newspapers, it is the women who have taken exception to some of the straightforward talk in Robert Herrick's "Togetherness." Evidently there are two sides to the question, even from a woman's point of view, as is shown by a letter written by a clever Western woman.

"Of course clubmen went off at a tangent, and if the diatribes of the club women elsewhere showed the same familiarity with the text as did those of our vicars, it was a sad arraignment of the intelligence of the cult, for it was evident that not one had read the book. Some one had told them it concerned May and December bargains for mercenary consideration, and that was all they had to say."

"But it is the people who have read the book who are doing the talking amongst themselves and to their friends. Some of our best-bred critics found it melodramatic and exaggerated, but women are prone to call it plain truth and to recommend others to read it 'even if you have to buy it.'"

"I know of one case where a woman has begun to realize that there are two sides to a bargain and that a man ought not to be a mere machine during the day, earning money for a woman's delectation, and an adoring satellite after working hours, worshipping midlife's social successes."

Bird Stories.

Much information, and entertainment as well, are to be found in "Bird Legend and Life" by Margaret Conison Walker (The Baker & Taylor Company). Brief legends of the supposed origins of birds are strung in a most attractive chapter on the life and habits known to exist among the species in question. One recognizes in the writer a student close to nature, who finds in the feathered families impulses and characteristics suggestive of humanity.

The entire grade work has been completed with the exception of the two blocks between Thirty-sixth and Thirty-eighth streets. The work of laying the rails will begin as soon as this has been completed.

NEW AUTO MIXTURE BARRED TO DEALERS

Ruling of Internal Revenue Commissioner of Interest to Owners of Machines.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has just rendered a decision that is of interest to owners of automobiles. The collector of internal revenue stationed at Boston, wrote the commissioner the other day, asking whether or not the use of a nonfreezing mixture containing one-third alcohol, one-third glycerin, and one-third water, for use in automobiles, was permissible. The commissioner has decided that the owner of a machine may make such a mixture for his own use, without violating the law, but if he gets in automobile supplies or the proprietor of a garage keeps such a mixture on hand for sale, then a special tax would have to be paid because of the alcohol used in the mixture. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, if he knows it, will not permit a dealer in automobile supplies to put on the market any new intoxicating drink under the name of auto mixture. Such a mixture, he thinks, would be in large demand in Kansas or Georgia.

The very general and keen interest in the revival of arts and crafts in America is a full and complete pleasure to those who are working among the so-called minor arts. In this connection, it is interesting to look into the past, particularly the work of the American Middle Ages, in which the handicrafts flourished in special perfection, and to see for ourselves how these crafts were pursued, and exactly what these arts really were.

There are very few books dealing with the arts and crafts of the olden time, which are adapted to inform those who have no intention of practicing such arts, and which will help them to appreciate the examples which they see in numerous museums or exhibitions, as a training process. In addition, the book should be, consequently, welcomed by a large class of readers.

Dogs and Cheer.

Cheerful Bill, the philosophical pup who contributes the material for a book of hearty laughs entitled "Bill, a Cheerful Dog," (Moffat, Yard & Co.) apparently intended to dedicate one of his illustrated "poems" to the subject: "Men and women, dogs and cats. Often have their little spats. Men and dogs, you must agree, Live in perfect amity. So this question's up once more: What are cats and women for?"

Read the Sunday evening edition of The Times tomorrow night if you want to keep abreast with the times.
